This publication would not be possible with the generous support of Dean Greenstreet and the School of Architecture and Urban Planning at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. The Dean, and a succession of Chairs at the Department of Architecture, have offered me an opportunity to expand my architectural knowledge by means of teaching young architects while I have continued to explore design and construction by means of my practice. This dual career has kept me fresh in both worlds, and has served to infuse my work with new ideas and possibilities. I am also in debt to my contributors for this publication, Robert Greenstreet and Sebastian Schmaling, both for their time, and for their insightful observations into the nature of my practice. I also thank Sebastian and his collaborator Brian Johnsen for providing me with the encouragement I needed to successfully pursue AIA Fellowship. Faculty Grace La has also provided advice, moral support and valuable technical assistance throughout this project.

I am also grateful to Joe Valerio, FAIA, the late Harry Van Oudenallen, AIA, Rick Jules, AIA, Steve Fiskum, AIA, and the late Ted Butler, FAIA, architects who offered me mentorship and training early in my career. They were generous with their time, and left me with lessons that I still draw upon today. I would also like to thank artist, curator, author and raconteur Tom Bamberger for his criticism and friendship over many years. He has encouraged me to question the soundness of my thinking and design work, and has helped me to develop a skepticism that I feel is fundamental to good work. I would also be remiss if I did not mention and thank Architectural Critic Whitney Gould, whose positive articles on my work served to make a broad audience aware of my practice, and elevated my career to a higher level.

The drawings, photographs and models contained herein are published with the generous assistance of HGA Architects, especially James Vander Heiden, AIA, who was critical to the success of my practice during the last 15 years. There are also many at HGA upon whom I have relied for criticism, assistance and technical know-how over many years and projects, whom I have attempted to list in detail in the Project Credits. My clients at HGA, without whom these projects would not have been possible, have frequently acted as collaborators and provocateurs, pushing my work into new directions and providing me with unique insights and experiences. Finally, I am indebted to my family, architect Joy Peot-Shields and our three fine sons: Drew, Sam and Grant. They have kept me young at heart and in spirit, and have provided me with a vital source of inspiration and support.
