

References

- Alred, J., Bufkin, A., Kennedy, K., Petro, A., Roberts, M., Stecklein, J., & Sturm, J. (1989). Lunar Outpost. Washington, D.C.: NASA Advanced Programs Office.
- Capps, S. & Moore, N. (1989). Partial gravity habitat study, with applications to lunar base design. Unpublished report, Sasakawa International Center for Space Architecture, College of Architecture, University of Houston.
- Carpenter, J. (1992, June). First Lunar Outpost: Detailed Assumptions (Working Drafts). Houston: NASA Johnson Space Center, Exploration Programs Office, Mission Analysis and System Engineering.
- Carpenter, J. (1992, June). First Lunar Outpost: Requirements and Guidelines (Working Draft). Houston: NASA Johnson Space Center, Exploration Programs Office, Mission Analysis and System Engineering.
- Chow, P. Y. (1992) Construction of pressurized, self-supporting membrane structure on Moon. Journal of Aerospace Engineering 5(3), 274-281.
- Connell, R., Fieber, J., Paruleski, K., & Torres, H. (1990) Design of an inflatable habitat for NASA's proposed lunar base. Unpublished report. NASA/Universities Space Research Association, Summer Internship Report.
- Harris, J.R. (1991). Airlocks: A study of previous use, technology and planet surface systems requirements. Contract NAS 9 - 17900. Lockheed Engineering & Sciences Company, Houston, TX.
- Kaplicky, J. and Nixon, D. (1983). Future systems - the bubble. Architecture and Urbanism (8812). Pp.96.
- Kanas, N. (1993). In space, on your nerves - you have to get along to go along to the stars. Ad Astra. May/June 1993. Pp. 30-33.
- Kline, R., Mc Caffrey, R., & Stein, D. (1989). Potential designs of space stations and platforms; Space Stations and Space Platforms — Concept, Design and Construction. Pp. 298-302.
- Laudon, K.C., and Laudon, J.P. (1991). Business Information Systems. Dryden Press. Illinois. Pp. 5.
- Mero-Raumstruktur GmbH & Co. (1983). Meroform Construction System M-12: Design, Structure and Technique.
- Moore, G.T. & Rebholz, P.J. (1992). Aerospace architecture: A comparative analysis of five lunar habitats. Paper presented at the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics 1992 Aerospace Design Conference, Irvine, CA., February, Paper AIAA 92-1096.
- National Aeronautics and Space Administration (1993). Internet: Telnet Spacelink, Marshall Space Flight Center. Multifunction CRT display system.
- National Aeronautics and Space Administration (1993). Internet: Telnet Spacelink, Marshall Space Flight Center. Smoke detection and fire suppression.
- National Aeronautics and Space Administration (1993). Internet: Telnet Spacelink, Marshall Space Flight Center. Tank pressure control experiment/thermal phenomena.
- National Aeronautics and Space Administration (1993). Internet: Telnet Spacelink, Marshall Space Flight Center. Tracking and data relay satellite system.
- National Aeronautics and Space Administration (1993). Internet: Telnet Spacelink, Marshall Space Flight Center. Voice command system.
- National Aeronautics and Space Administration (1987/1989). Man-systems integration standards: NASA STD 3000, Vol 1 (Rev. A, 1989). Washington, D.C.: NASA.
- Nealy, J.E., Wilson, J.W., & Townsend, L.W. (1988). Solar-flare shielding with regolith at a lunar base site. NASA - Langley Research Center, Hampton, VA.
- Perkinson, D., Adams, A., et al. (1992, May). First Lunar Outpost: Lunar Habitat Documentation. Huntsville, AL: NASA Marshall Space Flight Center.

Ramsey, P.S. (1991). Lubricant and seal technologies for the next generation of lunar roving vehicles. Boeing Defense and Space Group, Huntsville, AL.

Ramsey, C.G., and Sleeper, H.R. (1989). Architectural Graphic Standards. Student Edition. New York: John Wiley & Sons.

Sanders, M.S. and McCormick, E.J. (1987). Human Factors in Engineering and Design. McGraw-Hill, Inc. California. Pp. 4.

Sasakawa International Center for Space Architecture (SICSA) (1989). Astrotechtonics. 2(2). SICSA, College of Architecture, University of Houston, Pp. 8-9.

Sherwood, B., and Toups, L. (1992). Technical issues for lunar base structures. Journal of Aerospace Engineering 5(2).

Shiva, S.G. (1991). Computer Design and Architecture. Harper Collins Publishers, Inc. New York. Pp. 351; 422-430.

Steffy, G.R. (1990). Architectural Lighting Design. New York: Van Nostrand Reinhold Company.

Stuster, J. (1987). Habitability during long-duration space missions: key issues associated with a mission to Mars. In C.R. Stoker (Ed.) The Case for Mars III: Strategies for Exploration - General Interest and Overview: Proceedings of the 3rd Case for Mars Conference. San Diego, CA: Univelt. Pp. 181-191.

Tanenbaum, A.S. (1976). Structured Computer Organization. Prentice Hall. New Jersey. Pp. 60-62.

Thangavelu, M. (1991) MALEO: Modular assembly in low Earth orbit — Alternate strategy for lunar base development. Journal of Aeronautical Engineering 4(3), 256-273.

Vanderbilt, J.D., Criswell, M.E., & Sadeh, W.Z. (1988). Structures for a lunar base. In S.W. Johnson & J.P. Wetzel (Eds.) Engineering, Construction, and Operations in Space: Proceedings of Space 88. New York: American Society of Civil Engineers. Pp. 352-374.

Vaniman, D., Reedy, R., Heiken, G., Olhoeft, G., & Mendell, W. (1991). The Lunar Environment. In G.H. Heiken, D.T. Vaniman and B.M. French (Eds.) Lunar Sourcebook — A User's Guide to the Moon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press. Pp. 27-60.

Walden, B. (1989). Special report: Regolith. Oregon L-5 Society, Inc.